About the Course

The Oil & Gas sector operates at the frontlines of industrial risk, handling enormous volumes of highly inflammable and toxic hydrocarbons every single day. In such area Health, Safety & Environment (HSE) excellence is not just a requirement - it is a critical success factor.

As the industry continues to attract large numbers of fresh engineering and science graduates, many arrive with minimal exposure to safety in their academic curriculum. This gap makes structured competence building not just important, but indispensable for preparing them to thrive in a high-risk operational ecosystem.

Competence building in HSE equips professionals with the knowledge, skills, and mindset needed to prevent incidents, safeguard people and assets, and protect the environment. It strengthens regulatory compliance, enhances operational reliability, and fosters a strong safety culture.

For young professionals, investing in HSE learning offers a competitive edge and opens pathways to meaningful careers in an industry that values skill, responsibility, and leadership. For organizations, it mitigates risks, reduce accidents, preserves reputation, and supports sustainable operations. When combined with modern technology, hands-on learning, and stakeholder collaboration, HSE competence development becomes a powerful driver of safety performance and environmental stewardship.

Programme Objectives

NSC has developed this unique course with an objective :

- To equip newly inducted young engineers with a comprehensive understanding of HSE risks and mitigation measures as they enter the Oil & Gas sector.
- To enhance the HSE competency of existing Oil & Gas engineers and executives by strengthening their risk awareness, regulatory understanding, and application of best safety practices.

Learning Outcome

This program will enable participants to:

- Understand various systems and processes followed by the Oil and Gas industry to manage HSE risks and to assure maintaining high level of standards.
- Develop competencies in identifying and eliminating potential risks by understanding and maintaining barriers to prevent occurrence of events.
